Example

Both, in my opinion, are not preferable. Who wants to go a week without running water or electricity at home? Not a soul. However, if one of the two must be shut down for a week in order to benefit the people, I would prefer to be without electricity. I can survive without gadgets and enjoy the chance to spend time with my family. My family can assist me in solving any obstacles I may encounter while learning. Water, I believe, is a must. It is part and parcel to people's survival. The majority of people, including myself, value proper sanitation and personal cleanliness. Illnesses can be caused by poor sanitation, hunger, and, most importantly, dehydration.

Example

Being lost is one of the scariest things a child can go through. It gets even worse if it happens in a crowded place, because of how difficult it is to cover ground. In my view, in spite of being desperate to look for her mom, she will not panic or walk away aimlessly. Actually, I was lost once as a child. I was too engrossed with the toys outside a toy store in a shopping mall, that I failed to notice my aunt had gone into the shop right opposite the toy store. When I turned around and didn't see her, I did my best not to cry. I decided not to leave the place where she last saw me. Luckily, she looked for me and we were reunited. The same thing will happen to the young girl, I think.

Example	Except for one thing, nothing made me angry today. I was on my way to work when I got stuck in traffic. That won't get me upset, we felt as if we were in a very long queue, and it was pissing me off. I was getting bored, and my phone's batteries were running low. There's nothing I can do about the bumper-to-bumper traffic. It felt like the day was going down in flames, I felt compelled to return home instead. It is the first time I have encountered such a traffic jam, and the reason is that there was a holiday celebration on the streets that I completely forgot about. Good thing I remembered to bring my favorite book! It has altered my mood. I was like I was on cloud nine. Finally, I was able to get to the office.

Example

You'll have to examine a few aspects when deciding whether to buy a desktop or a laptop computer to discover which one best meets your needs. Despite the fact that many families have both, the dispute over laptops vs. desktop PCs—and, more particularly, which is superior—is as ancient as modern times. You should not miss the boat on buying these kinds of gadgets nowadays. To live it up, we should use it every day. Laptops are portable and can readily connect to the internet, but a desktop PC is a static, fixed computer that would be kept on a desk at an office or in a bedroom. If I were to choose, I would rather choose a laptop because it is convenient to use and it is the best option for youngsters who attend school outside of the house on a daily basis and require a computer for class. All in all, laptops and desktop computers have the same function. They both provide you with a computer. Your best option will be determined by how you want to utilize your new computer.
